

HERALD "AD" RESTORES PEARL; EARNS $1,000 FOR THE FINDER

Friend of Mr. and Mrs. Pierre C. Cartier Loses It in the Cohan Theatre, and Jacob Myers of the Playhouse Steps Into a Small Fortune.

It isn't such a terrible town after all. And an honest man can sometimes make his reading of a daily newspaper work wonders for him. Yesterday happened to be a $1,000 day for Jacob Myers, advertising agent of the George M. Cohan theatre, because he read The New York Herald carefully on the way to business.

After the crowd had filed in to see the performance of "The Little Girls in Blue" last Thursday evening Myers found chatting with Thomas Lynch, who takes tickets at the Cohan Theatre. Scuffing his foot casually over the floor he felt a hard object under his shoe. If it had not been so hard and sizeable he says he wouldn't have noticed it. It might have been a peacock, but it proved to be a pearl. He casually showed it to Harry Davis, manager of the theatre, and Sidney Harris, treasurer. There was a moment's offer or two, it is said, but the pearl didn't get far from Myers' sight that night and on Friday while he waited to find out its owner.

Yesterday morning Myers called over the "Lost and Found" column of The New York Herald for reward: "$1,000 reward will be paid for return of white drop pearl weighing 56 grains, lost evening of May 5, either in front of 109 East Seventy-ninth street, or at the entrance to or in the seats (about twelfth row) of the George M. Cohan Theatre. Return to Cartier, Inc., 653 Fifth Avenue."

That was Myers' cue for action, and he hurried over to the Fifth Avenue jewelry establishment to report his discovery. He left the pearl, but returned to the theatre with the firm's check for $1,000.

Mr. Pierre C. Cartier of Cartier, Inc., lives at 109 East Seventy-ninth street, but he explained last evening that his firm acted only for a client in the recovery of the gem. He was pledged not to divulge any name, he said, and could speak of her only as one of a party of eight who had been Mrs. Cartier's and his guest at dinner and the theatre Thursday evening. Miss Veith believes the bracelet slipped from her wrist while she was carrying a collection box along the aisles. It could not be found in the theatre, and the police have been notified.
